15 Plaintiffs,

16 v.

17 SECURUS TECHNOLOGIES, INC.,

18 Defendant.
19

Case No.: 16cv1283 JM (MDD)

ORDER DENYING MOTION FOR PARTIAL SUMMARY JUDGMENT
AND GRANTING IN PART MOTION FOR CLASS CERTIFICATION

20 Presently before the court are Plaintiffs' motion for partial summary judgment (Doc.
21 No. 101) and renewed motion for class certification (Doc. No. 122). Defendant Securus 22 Technologies, Inc. ("Securus") opposes both motions. For the reasons discussed below, 23 Plaintiffs' motion for class certification is granted in part and the motion for partial 24 summary judgment is denied.

25 BACKGROUND

26 Plaintiffs Juan Romero, Frank Tiscareno, and Kenneth Elliot filed this putative class 27 action on May 27, 2016, alleging Securus unlawfully recorded detainee-attorney calls.
28 Securus provides inmate communication services for correctional facilities throughout

1 California. Plaintiffs are two former inmates and a criminal defense attorney, all of whom 2 used Securus' telephone systems to make calls to and from certain correctional facilities in 3 California and allege that their calls were recorded.

4 MOTION FOR PARTIAL SUMMARY JUDGMENT

5 Plaintiffs seek summary judgment on one element of their claims—whether 6 violation of California Penal Code § 636(a) requires Securus to intentionally record a 7 conversation between a detainee and his or her attorney without permission. (Doc. No.
8 101.) For the reasons discussed below, Plaintiffs' motion is denied.

9 I. Legal Standards

10 A motion for summary judgment shall be granted where “there is no genuine issue 11 as to any material fact and . . . the moving party is entitled to judgment as a matter of law.”
12 Fed. R. Civ. P. 56(c). The moving party bears the initial burden of informing the court of 13 the basis for its motion and identifying those portions of the record that it believes 14 demonstrate the absence of a genuine issue of material fact. Celotex Corp. v.
15 Catrett, 477 U.S. 317, 323 (1986). But Federal Rule of Civil Procedure 56 contains “no 16 express or implied requirement . . . that the moving party support its motion with affidavits 17 or other similar materials negating the opponent's claim.” Id. (emphasis in original).

18 In response to a motion for summary judgment, the nonmoving party cannot rest on 19 the mere allegations or denials of a pleading, but must “go beyond the pleadings and by 20 [its] own affidavits, or by the depositions, answers to interrogatories, and admissions on 21 file, designate specific facts showing that there is a genuine issue for trial.” Id. at 324 22 (internal citations omitted). In other words, the nonmoving party may not rely solely on 23 conclusory allegations unsupported by factual data. Taylor v. List, 880 F.2d 1040, 1045 24 (9th Cir. 1989). The court must examine the evidence in the light most favorable to the 25 nonmoving party, United States v. Diebold, Inc., 369 U.S. 654, 655 (1962), and any doubt 26 as to the existence of an issue of material fact requires denial of the motion, Anderson v.
27 Liberty Lobby, Inc., 477 U.S. 242, 255 (1986).

II. Analysis

Plaintiffs argue that violation of California Penal Code § 636(a) does not require a defendant to intentionally record a conversation between a detainee and his or her attorney without permission. (Doc. No. 101.) Securus makes two arguments in opposition. (Doc. No. 103.) First, Securus argues that ruling on Plaintiffs' motion would be an advisory opinion. Second, Securus argues that § 636 has an intent requirement.

A. Undisputed Facts

Plaintiffs cites¹ the following evidence indicating that Securus recorded phone calls between inmates and attorneys without their permission: To protect confidentiality, an attorney could designate his or her telephone number as private or "Do Not Record" in Securus' system. (Doc. No. 62-38, Elliott Decl. ¶ 5; Doc. No. 38-1, Jones Decl. ¶ 4.) This designation indicated that calls with the private number should not be recorded. (See Doc. No. 62-38, Elliott Decl. ¶ 5.)

In early 2014, the Sheriff's Department became aware that Securus recorded numerous inmate telephone calls with private numbers. (Doc. No. 62-27, Exh. 24.) On March 25, 2014, Captain Clamser of the Sheriff's Department emailed Securus stating that he had randomly reviewed the call logs for the period of April 1, 2013 through March 25, 2014 and found a number of private calls were recorded that should not have been. (Id. at 3-4.)² Captain Clamser stated that he knew Securus was "trying to determine why private calls are being recorded and I wanted to provide you with additional examples." (Id. at 3.) In a series of email exchanges between Captain Clamser and Securus employees during the period of April 4, 2014 to August 5, 2014, Securus indicated that it spent significant time and resources trying "to find the root cause" of "the issues of the private attorney calls that

¹ Plaintiffs' motion for summary judgment cites to Securus' opposition to Plaintiffs' initial motion for class certification. Securus' opposition, in turn, cites to the exhibits to Plaintiffs' motion for class certification. These facts are drawn from the exhibits to Plaintiffs' initial motion for class certification. (Doc. Nos. 62-2 through 62-48.)

² All page citations in this memorandum refer to those created by the CM/ECF system.

1 are being recorded,” but was unable to determine why the calls were recorded. (Doc. No.
2 62-4, Exh 1. at 18-62.) Securus attempted to reproduce the issue to find the cause, but in 3 the emails before the court, the “root cause” of the issue was never discovered. (Id.)
4 During this period, the Sheriff’s Department emailed Securus on a rolling basis with lists
5 of recorded private calls and asked Securus to delete the call recordings. (See id.) Securus 6 regularly responded that it would purge the call recordings. (Id.) Securus’ Director of 7 Support Services, Ian Jones, declares that “Securus did purge certain calls it learned were 8 recorded accidentally and that the San Diego County Sheriff’s Office had specifically 9 requested to be purged.” (Doc. No. 38-1, Jones Decl. ¶ 7.)

10 These facts are undisputed for purposes of this motion as Securus cites no evidence 11 disputing these facts.

12 B. Advisory Opinion

13 1. Motion for Partial Summary Judgment

14 Securus argues that ruling on the issue presented by Plaintiffs’ motion would be 15 “entirely academic” and amount to an advisory opinion as Plaintiffs “failed to show an 16 absence of a material dispute regarding all facts that would trigger the need for any inquiry
17 into whether California Penal Code Section 636(a) requires intent.” (Doc. No. 103 at 4-5.) 18 Specifically, Securus argues that Plaintiffs “merely recite Plaintiffs’ own views about other 19 aspects of the record.” (Id. at 2.)

20 The question presented in Plaintiffs’ motion for summary judgment is not 21 hypothetical or “academic.” Rule 56 provides that a “party may move for summary 22 judgment, identifying each claim or defense—or the part of each claim or defense—on 23 which summary judgment is sought.” Fed. R. Civ. P. 56(a) (emphasis added). See also 24 Pinnacle Fitness & Recreation Mgmt., LLC v. Jerry & Vickie Moyes Family Tr., 844 F.
25 Supp. 2d 1078, 1093 (S.D. Cal. 2012). Plaintiffs seek summary judgment on one element 26 of their California Invasion of Privacy Act (“CIPA”) claims—whether Securus had the 27 intent, if any, necessary to violate the statute. Plaintiffs cite evidence indicating that 28 Securus inadvertently recorded inmate-attorney calls. Although Plaintiffs specifically cite

1 to Securus' opposition to Plaintiffs' motion for class certification, this opposition 2 summarizes and cites to evidence in the record that the court may consider on summary
3 judgment. See Fed. R. Civ. P. 56(c)(1). Whether this evidence is sufficient to grant 4 Plaintiffs' motion for summary judgment on the intent element is an issue properly decided 5 by the court.

6 2. Article III Standing

7 Securus argues that Plaintiffs lack standing because there is no evidence Plaintiffs 8 suffered "an injury in fact." Securus argues that Plaintiffs fail to present any evidence that 9 their calls with persons covered by § 636(a) were recorded.

10 As the party putting the claims before the court, Plaintiffs bear the burden of 11 establishing jurisdiction. Kokkonen v. Guardian Life Ins. Co. of Am., 511 U.S. 375, 377
12 (1994). There is no subject matter jurisdiction without standing, and the "irreducible 13 constitutional minimum" of standing consists of three elements. Lujan v. Defenders of 14 Wildlife, 504 U.S. 555, 560 (1992). A plaintiff must have (1) suffered an injury in fact, 15 (2) which is fairly traceable to the challenged conduct of the defendant, and (3) which is 16 likely to be redressed by a favorable judicial decision. Id. at 560–61. To establish injury 17 in fact—the relevant element here—the plaintiff must show that he or she suffered "an 18 invasion of a legally protected interest" that is "concrete and particularized" and "actual or 19 imminent, not conjectural or hypothetical." Id. at 560 (internal quotations omitted). To 20 prevail on his or her motion for summary judgment, "a plaintiff must establish that there 21 exists no genuine issue of material fact as to justiciability or the merits." Dep't of 22 Commerce v. U.S. House of Representatives, 525 U.S. 316, 329 (1999) (citing Lujan, 497 23 U.S. at 884). "In a class action, standing is satisfied if at least one named plaintiff meets 24 the requirements." Bates v. United Parcel Serv., Inc., 511 F.3d 974, 985 (9th Cir. 2007).

25 In their reply brief, Plaintiffs cite to evidence (previously cited in their initial motion 26 for class certification) indicating that the named Plaintiffs' calls were recorded. Plaintiffs 27 Romero and Tiscareno declare that a March 25, 2014 email from the Sheriff's Department 28 indicates that their attorney's phone number was recorded between April 2013 and March

2014. (Doc. No. 62-41, Romero Decl. ¶ 7; Doc. No. 62-42, Exh. 1; Doc. No. 62-43, Tiscareno Decl. ¶ 7; Doc. No. 62-44, Exh. 1.)³ Additionally, an exhibit attached to Securus' interrogatory responses indicates that on February 20, 2014, Romero's call with his attorney's telephone number was recorded. (Doc. No. 74-2, Exh. 1 at 29.) Plaintiff Elliott's telephone number⁴ was also among those identified in the Sheriff Department's March 25, 2014 email as recorded. (Doc. No. 62-40, Exh. 2 at 4.) The same exhibit attached to Securus' interrogatory responses further indicates that a call with Elliott's number was recorded on November 6, 2013. (Doc. No. 74-2, Exh. 1 at 25.)

Securus "fail[s] to set forth any specific facts showing that there is a genuine issue of standing for trial" as to whether Plaintiffs' calls were recorded. See Dep't of Commerce, 525 U.S. at 330. The evidence suggests that Securus recorded Elliott's call with an inmate and Romero's call with his attorney's number. Securus cites no evidence disputing Plaintiffs' evidence and did not raise any objections to this evidence during the hearing. In sum, on the record before the court there is not a genuine issue of material fact on the issue of whether Plaintiffs have standing.

C. Section 636(a) Is Not a Strict Liability Offense

Plaintiffs argue that § 636(a) is a strict liability offense. This subdivision is not a strict liability offense as it does not expressly or by necessary implication exclude an intent requirement.

⁴ Elliott's number is "760-630-3333." (Doc. No. 74-4, Elliott Decl. ¶¶ 2-3.) An email the Sheriff's Department sent to Securus also indicates that a telephone call with this number was recorded.

1 1. Plain Language of § 636

2 Plaintiffs argue that the plain language of § 636(a) does not impose an intent 3 requirement, unlike other sections of the California Invasion of Privacy Act (“CIPA”) such 4 as §§ 632(a), 632.7(a), and 636(b).

5 “In interpreting a state statute, we must determine what meaning the state’s highest 6 court would give to the law.” Bass v. Cty. of Butte, 458 F.3d 978, 981 (9th Cir. 2006).
7 Thus, the court must follow the state’s rules of statutory interpretation. Id. “As in any case
8 involving statutory interpretation, our fundamental task is to determine the Legislature’s 9 intent so as to effectuate the law’s purpose.” Id. at 981-82. (quoting People v. Murphy, 10 25 Cal. 4th 136 (2001)). A court should “examine the language itself, the legislative history 11 of the provision and case law construing the crucial language, in that order.” People v.
12 Childs, 220 Cal. App. 4th 1079, 1098 (2013) (citing People v. Heitzman, 9 Cal. 4th 189, 13 200 (1994)). A statute’s language should be given a “plain and commonsense meaning.” 14 Bass, 458 F.3d at 982 (quoting Murphy, 25 Cal. 4th 136). “However, text is not to be 15 interpreted in isolation.” Id. “Rather, we must look to ‘the entire substance of the statute 16 . . . in order to determine the scope and purpose of the provision.’” Id.

17 Section 636(a) provides in full—

18 (a) Every person who, without permission from all parties to the conversation, 19 eavesdrops on or records, by means of an electronic device, a conversation, or any 20 portion thereof, between a person who is in the physical custody of a law
21 enforcement officer or other public officer, or who is on the property of a law 22 enforcement agency or other public agency, and that person’s attorney, religious adviser, or licensed physician, is guilty of a felony punishable by imprisonment pursuant to subdivision (h) of Section 1170.

23 The next subdivision, § 636(b), prohibits non-electronic eavesdropping and provides in 24 part—

25 (b) Every person who, intentionally and without permission from all parties to the 26 conversation, nonelectronically eavesdrops upon a conversation, or any portion 27 thereof, that occurs between a person who is in the physical custody of a law 28 enforcement officer or other public officer and that person’s attorney, religious adviser, or licensed physician, is guilty of a public offense. . . . This subdivision does 1 not apply to conversations that are inadvertently overheard or that take place in a 2 courtroom or other room used for adjudicatory proceedings.

3 (emphasis added). Similarly, § 632(a) prohibits a person from “intentionally” 4 eavesdropping on a confidential communication through electronic means, and § 632.7 5 prohibits “intentionally” recording cordless and cellular telephone communications.
6 Plaintiffs argue that if the legislature intended subdivision (a) to have a mens rea 7 requirement there would be language to that effect, especially when this subdivision is 8 compared to the express intent requirement of subdivision (b) and §§ 632(a) and 632.7(a).

9 The absence of the word “intentionally” in § 636(a), when compared with §§ 632(a), 10 632.7(a), and 636(b), suggests that the legislature excluded this word. But it is not clear 11 from the language of the statute whether omission of this word was meant to exclude any 12 intent requirement from this criminal offense.

13 2. Public Welfare Offenses

14 The California Supreme Court set forth a framework for analyzing criminal statutes 15 without an express intent requirement in In re Jorge M., 23 Cal. 4th 866, 872 (2000). “That 16 the statute contains no reference to knowledge or other language of mens rea is not itself 17 dispositive.” Id. at 872. “When a criminal statute . . . fails to expressly articulate the 18 requisite scienter, . . . [o]n occasion, and particularly for public welfare offenses, a statute 19 will omit any reference to scienter, because no scienter is required.” People v. Hall, 2 Cal.
20 5th 494, 501 (2017) (citing Stark v. Superior Court, 52 Cal. 4th 368, 393 (2011)). “More 21 commonly, though, courts construe criminal statutes against the backdrop of the common 22 law presumption that scienter is required and imply the requisite mental state, even where 23 the statute is silent.” Id. (citing Staples v. United States, 511 U.S. 600, 605-06 (1994); In 24 re Jorge M., 23 Cal. 4th at 872). The general rule that a defendant must have “some form 25 of guilty intent, knowledge, or criminal negligence is of such long standing and so 26 fundamental to our criminal law” that this requirement “is an invariable element of every 27
28

1 crime unless excluded expressly or by necessary implication.” In re Jorge M., 23 Cal. 4th 2 at 872 (internal citations omitted).

3 Public welfare offenses are generally “based upon the violation of statutes which are 4 purely regulatory in nature and involve widespread injury to the public.” Id. (citation
5 omitted). “Examples of such statutes are furnishing alcohol to a minor (In re Jennings 6 (2004) 34 Cal. 4th 254, 266. . .), sale of adulterated food (In re Casperson (1945) 69 Cal.
7 App. 2d 441, 443. . .) and driving with a prohibited blood-alcohol concentration (Ostrow
8 v. Municipal Court (1983) 149 Cal. App. 3d 668. . .).” People v. King, 38 Cal. 4th 617, 9 623 (2006). “These offenses usually involve light penalties and no moral obloquy or 10 damage to reputation. Although criminal sanctions are relied upon, the primary purpose 11 of the statute is regulation rather than punishment or correction.” Id.

12 In recent jurisprudence, the California Supreme Court has repeatedly declined to 13 construe statutes without an express intent requirement as strict liability offenses. See, e.g., 14 Stark, 52 Cal. 4th at 393 (embezzlement statute criminalizing appropriation of public funds 15 is not a strict liability offense); People v. Simon, 9 Cal. 4th 493, 519–21 (1995) (criminal 16 violation of Corporations Code section 25401, prohibiting the offer or sale of securities by 17 means of materially false statements or omissions, is not a strict liability offense); People 18 v. Rubalcava, 23 Cal. 4th 322, 332 (2000) (penal code § 12020, prohibiting the carrying of 19 a concealed dirk or dagger, is not a strict liability offense); King, 38 Cal. 4th at 624-26 20 (statute prohibiting possession of short-barreled firearm is not a strict liability offense).
21 But see In re Jennings, 34 Cal. 4th 254 (2004) (statutory misdemeanor offense of 22 purchasing alcohol for persons under 21 years of age is a public welfare offense because 23 legislative history weighed heavily against an intent requirement, offense was a 24 misdemeanor, and it sought to prevent widespread and serious harm to the public). The 25 California Supreme Court has expressly recognized a “prevailing trend ‘away from the 26 imposition of criminal sanctions in the absence of culpability where the governing statute, 27 by implication or otherwise, expresses no legislative intent or policy to be served by 28 imposing strict liability.” Simon, 9 Cal. 4th at 521 (citation omitted).

Where legislative intent is not readily discerned from the text of the statute itself, as in this case, the California Supreme Court has found consideration of the following factors useful: (1) legislative history and context; (2) general provisions on mens rea or strict liability crimes; (3) severity of the punishment provided for the crime; (4) seriousness of harm to the public that may be expected to follow from the forbidden conduct; (5) a defendant's opportunity to ascertain the true facts; (6) difficulty prosecutors would have in proving a mental state for the crime; and (7) number of expected prosecutions under the statute. In re Jorge M., 23 Cal. 4th at 873.

i. Legislative History⁵

The legislative history of § 636 lends itself to more than one interpretation, but does not expressly or by necessary implication exclude an intent requirement from subdivision (a). CIPA (§ 630 et seq.) was enacted in 1967, replacing prior laws that permitted the recording of telephone conversations with the consent one party to the conversation. In 1967, current subdivisions (a) and (c) were enacted together as a single § 636. (Doc. No. 101-3, Exh. 1 at 10.) At that time, § 636 did not include the word “intentionally” or any other mens rea language.⁶

⁶ As enacted in 1967, § 636 provided in full: “Every person, who, without permission from all parties to the conversation, eavesdrops on or records by means of an electronic or other device, a conversation, or any portion thereof, between a person who is in the physical custody of a law enforcement officer or other public officer, or who is on the property of a law enforcement agency or other public agency, and such person's attorney, religious advisor, or licensed physician, is guilty of a felony; provided, however, the provisions of this section shall not apply to any employee of a public utility engaged in the business of providing service and facilities for telephone or telegraph communications while engaged in the construction, maintenance, conduct or operation of the service or facilities of such public utility who listens in to such conversations for the limited purpose of testing or servicing such equipment.”

1 In 1995, the legislature broke § 636 into three subdivisions. The original language 2 was retained as subdivision (a), but narrowed to include only electronic eavesdropping and 3 recording. Subdivision (b), prohibiting a person from “intentionally” eavesdropping on 4 conversations through non-electronic means, was added for the first time. The committee 5 and Assembly analyses suggest that the word “intentionally” was specifically omitted from 6 subdivision (a) but included in subdivision (b).

7 On February 24, 1995, a bill to amend § 636 was introduced that would have made 8 the following changes to the 1967 statute:⁷

9 636. Every person who, intentionally and without permission from all parties to the 10 conversation, eavesdrop on or records ~~by means of an electronic or other device, in~~ 11 any manner, a conversation, or any portion thereof, between a person who is in the 12 physical custody of a law enforcement officer or other public officer, or who is on 13 the property of a law enforcement agency or other public agency, and ~~such~~ that 14 person’s attorney, religious advisor, or licensed physician, is guilty of a felony . . .

15 Assem. Bill 1892, 1995-1996 Reg. Sess. (Cal. Feb. 24, 1995). The proposed bill stated 16 that it would “revise this provision to narrow its scope by providing it applies to persons 17 who eavesdrop on this kind of conversation intentionally and without permission, and to 18 expand its scope by providing it applies to persons who eavesdrop on this kind of 19 conversation in any manner.” Id.

20 On May 2, 1995, the Assembly Committee on Public Safety analysis of this version 21 of the bill found that “[u]nder current law . . . [i]n every crime or public offense, there must 22 exist a union, or joint operation of act and intent, or criminal negligence. (Penal Code 23 section 20.)” Assem. Comm. on Pub. Safety, Bill Analysis of Assem. Bill 1892, 1995-24 1996 Reg. Sess., at 1 (Cal. 1995). Thus, the analysis found, “[c]urrent law already requires 25 that the defendant intentionally eavesdrop and that he or she engage in that activity without 26 permission.” Id. at 2.

27
28 ⁷ Additions are italicized and deletions are struck through.

1 The Committee's analysis also noted that the bill was "prompted by a single case in 2 which a Deputy District Attorney is alleged to have engaged in unethical activity by 3 directing an investigator to position herself in a place where she could deliberately overhear 4 certain conversations between a criminal defendant and the defendant's attorney." Id. This 5 case was Morrow v. Superior Court, 30 Cal. App. 4th 1252 (1994). In Morrow, a deputy 6 district attorney and investigator conspired to eavesdrop on a conversation between 7 burglary suspect and his counsel in a courtroom holding area. Id. The attorney general 8 filed criminal charges against the district attorney and investigator for violation of § 636, 9 but the charges were dismissed on the grounds that the statute was ambiguous and applied 10 only to electronic eavesdropping. Id. at 1256. The author of the bill indicated that the 11 bill's purpose was "to widen the currently narrow interpretation of eavesdropping, Penal 12 Code section 636. This statute [sic] is intended to protect a person's Sixth Amendment 13 right to counsel and must be amended to clearly prohibit any form of intentional 14 eavesdropping which threatens a person's right to counsel." Assem. Comm. on Pub.
15 Safety, Bill Analysis of Assem. Bill 1892, 1995-1996 Reg. Sess., at 2 (Cal. 1995). The 16 Committee's comments indicate that some representatives had concerns that this version 17 of the bill was overbroad and would apply in situations where there was no reasonable 18 expectation of privacy. See id. at 2-4.

19 The bill was amended on May 4, 1995, as follows:

20 636. (a) Every person who, ~~intentionally and~~ without permission from all parties 21 to the conversation, eavesdrops on or records, ~~in any manner by means of an~~ 22 electronic or other device, a conversation, or any portion thereof, between a person 23 who is in the physical custody of a law enforcement officer or other public officer, 24 or who is on the property of a law enforcement agency or other public agency, and that person's attorney, religious advisor, or licensed physician, is guilty of a felony; ~~provided, however, the provisions of this of a felony.~~

25 (b) Every person who, intentionally and without permission from all 26 parties to the conversation, nonelectronically eavesdrop upon a conversation, or 27 any portion thereof, that occurs between a person who is in the physical custody of 28 a law enforcement or other public officer and that person's attorney, religious advisor, or licensed physician is guilty of a public offense. This subdivision applies

1 to conversations that occur in a place, and under circumstances, where there exists 2 a reasonable expectation of privacy, including a custody holding area, holding area,
3 or anteroom. This subdivision does not apply to conversations that are inadvertently 4 overheard or that take place in a courtroom or other room used for adjudicatory 5 proceedings.

6 Assem. Bill 1892, 1995-1996 Reg. Sess. (Cal. May 4, 1995) (subdivision (c) omitted). The 7 bill's language regarding the purpose of the bill also changed. The statement that the 8 amendment would "narrow [the statute's] scope by providing it applies to persons who 9 eavesdrop on this kind of conversation intentionally and without permission," was 10 removed, among other deletions and additions. Id.

11 On May 30, 1995, the bill was amended a second time. The third version of the bill 12 clarified that the purpose of the amendment was to ensure subdivision (a) "apply only to 13 eavesdropping by means of an electronic device." Assem. Bill 1892, 1995-1996 Reg. Sess.
14 (Cal. May 30, 1995). The language of subdivision (a) was amended as follows:

15 (a) Every person who, without permission from all parties to the conversation, 16 eavesdrops on or records by means of an electronic ~~or other~~ device, a conversation, 17 or any portion thereof, between a person who is in the physical custody of a law
18 enforcement officer or other public officer, or who is on the property of a law
19 enforcement agency or other public agency, and that person's attorney, religious 20 advisor, or licensed physician, is guilty of a felony.

21 Id.

22 On June 13, 1995, the Senate Committee on Criminal Procedure held a hearing on 23 the third version of the bill. The Committee's analysis of the bill indicated that the 24 amendment "changes the felony provision [subdivision (a)] of eavesdropping law to apply 25 only to eavesdropping by electronic device and adds a wobbler provision [subdivision (b)] 26 prohibiting the intentional non-electronic eavesdropping on a conversation between an in-27 custody defendant and his/her attorney" Assem. Comm. on Crim. Proc., Bill Analysis 28 of Assem. Bill 1892, 1995-1996 Reg. Sess., at 2 (Cal. June 3, 1995). The analysis noted that "[t]he purpose of this bill is to prohibit all intentional eavesdropping on conversations between and [sic] in-custody defendant and his/her attorney, religious advisor or licensed

1 physician under circumstance [sic] where there is a reasonable expectation of privacy.” Id.
2 According to the author, the bill “applies only to the narrow circumstances that precipitated 3 its introduction”—Morrow, 30 Cal. App. 4th 1252.

4 Before enactment, the Assembly analysis of the third version of the bill found that 5 it: “1) Removes the intent requirement when eavesdropping is done by electronic means 6 under specified circumstances. 2) Expands eavesdropping law by applying the law to non-7 electronic but intentional eavesdropping done without permission under specified 8 circumstances.” Assem. Third Reading, Bill Analysis of Assem. Bill 1892, 1995-1996 9 Reg. Sess., at 1 (Cal. 1995). The analysis found that “[t]his statute is intended to protect a 10 person’s Sixth Amendment right to counsel and to clearly prohibit any form of intentional 11 eavesdropping which threatens a person’s right to counsel.” Id. at 2.

12 The third version of the bill was enacted on July 17, 1995. Assem. 1892, 1995-1996 13 Reg. Sess. ch. 129 (Cal. 1995). Section 636(a) was amended again in 2011, adding that 14 violation of subdivision (a) was “punishable by imprisonment pursuant to subdivision (h) 15 of Section 1170.” Assem. 109, 2011-2012 Reg. Sess. ch. 15 (Cal. 2011).

16 The legislative history of § 636 does not expressly or by necessary implication 17 exclude an intent requirement from subdivision (a). Although susceptible to multiple 18 interpretations, the legislative history could be read as imbuing § 636(a) with an intent 19 requirement. The Assembly Committee on Public Safety’s analysis of the first version of 20 the 1995 bill quoted Penal Code § 20 and found that “[c]urrent law already requires that 21 the defendant intentionally eavesdrop and that he or she engage in that activity without 22 permission.” Removal of the word “intentionally” from subdivision (a) in the second 23 version of the bill could thus be viewed as the deletion of unnecessary language. See 24 People v. Sainz, 74 Cal. App. 4th 565, 573 (1999) (“Failure to make changes in a given 25 statute in a particular respect when the subject is before the Legislature, and changes are 26 made in other respects, is indicative of an intention to leave the law unchanged in that 27 respect.”) (quoting People v. Lewis, 21 Cal. App. 4th 243, 248 (1993)). Committee 28 analyses found that the purpose of the 1995 amendments was to prohibit “any form of

1 intentional eavesdropping which threatens a person’s right to counsel” and “all intentional 2 eavesdropping,” without specifically limiting this purpose to subdivision (b). Lastly, the 3 1995 amendments that added subdivision (b) were aimed solely at addressing the narrow 4 issue before the legislature—eavesdropping through non-electronic means.⁸

5 ii. General Provision on Mens Rea

6 California Penal Code § 20 is a generally applicable rule on mens rea that applies in 7 this case. In re Jorge M., 23 Cal. 4th at 879. Section 20 provides that “[i]n every crime or 8 public offense there must exist a union, or joint operation of act and intent, or criminal 9 negligence.” It requires “an intent to do the forbidden thing or commit the interdicted act,” 10 but does not require “a specific purpose or intent to violate the law.” Stark, 52 Cal. 4th at 11 392 (quoting People v. Dillon, 199 Cal. 1, 7 (1926)). It requires “wrongful intent.” Id.
12 (emphasis in original). Although not inflexible, “where the penalties imposed are 13 substantial, section 20 can fairly be said to establish a presumption against criminal liability 14 without mental fault or negligence, rebuttable only by compelling evidence of legislative 15 intent to dispense with mens rea entirely.” In re Jorge M., 23 Cal. 4th at 879. This 16 presumption applies here.

17 ///

18 ///

19 _____
20 ⁸ Securus argues that In re Arias, 42 Cal. 3d 667 (1986) establishes that § 636 only prohibits 21 intentional recording or eavesdropping. In this case, the California Supreme Court noted 22 in dictum that “[t]he Privacy Act has been held to proscribe only intentional as opposed to 23 inadvertent overhearing or interception of communications.” Id. at 682 n.14 (citing People 24 v. Buchanan 26 Cal. App. 3d 274, 287 (1972)). This dictum does not decide the issue.
25 Buchanan held only that §§ 631(a) and 632(a), which proscribe “intentionally” 26 eavesdropping, require intentional wiretapping and eavesdropping, Buchanan, 26 Cal.
27 App. 3d at 288. The other cases Securus cites for the proposition that any violation of 28 CIPA must be intentional are similarly inapposite. See People v. Superior Court of Los Angeles Cty., 70 Cal. 2d 123 (1969) (stating in dictum that Cal. Penal Code § 653j, now § 632, which proscribed “intentionally” eavesdropping had an intent requirement); People v.
Algire, 222 Cal. App. 4th 219 (2013) (holding § 632, which proscribes “intentionally” eavesdropping, has an intent requirement).

1 iii. Severity of Punishment

2 A person who violates § 636(a) “is guilty of a felony punishable by imprisonment 3 pursuant to subdivision (h) of Section 1170.” Cal. Penal Code. § 636(a). Penal Code 4 § 1170(h) provides in relevant part that “a felony punishable pursuant to this subdivision 5 where the term is not specified in the underlying offense shall be punishable by a term of 6 imprisonment in a county jail for 16 months, or two or three years.” A felony is a harsh 7 punishment. As the California Supreme Court discussed in In re Jorge M.,

8 In Staples, [511 U.S. at 618], the United States Supreme Court observed that its own 9 early cases “might suggest that punishing a violation as a felony is simply 10 incompatible with the theory of the public welfare offense.” The high court 11 ultimately found it unnecessary to embrace that view as a definitive rule, but did 12 conclude the harsh potential penalties—up to 10 years’ imprisonment—imposed 13 under the federal law at issue for possession of an unregistered machine gun 14 militated strongly against a construction dispensing with mens rea. This court 15 agreed with Staples’s skepticism about felony punishment for putative public 16 welfare offenses in People v. Coria, [21 Cal. 4th 868, 877 (1999)], observing that 17 manufacturing methamphetamine “is a felony, which is as bad a word as you can 18 give to man or thing.” Such an offense, we concluded, is difficult to characterize as 19 “a mere regulatory statute which imposes light penalties with no damage to 20 reputation.”

21 In re Jorge M., 23 Cal. 4th at 879-80 (internal citations omitted). Felony punishment 22 “reinforces the presumption expressed by section 20 and suggests that correspondingly 23 strong evidence of legislative intent is required to exclude mens rea from the offense.” Id.
24 at 880. This factor weighs against strict liability.

25 iv. Seriousness of Harm to Public

26 “[W]hen a crime’s statutory definition does not expressly include any scienter 27 element, the fact the Legislature intended the law to remedy a serious and widespread 28 public safety threat militates against the conclusion it also intended impliedly to include in the definition a scienter element especially burdensome to prove.” Id. at 881. Plaintiffs argue that subdivision (a) has no intent requirement “likely due to the exponential advance

1 of electronic eavesdropping and surveillance technology, as well as the rising public
2 welfare concerns associated with data privacy.” (Doc. No. 101-1 at 14.)

3 In enacting the CIPA, the legislature “declare[d] that advances in science and 4 technology have led to the development of new devices and techniques for the purpose of 5 eavesdropping upon private communications and that the invasion of privacy resulting 6 from the continual and increasing use of such devices and techniques has created a serious 7 threat to the free exercise of personal liberties and cannot be tolerated in a free and civilized 8 society.” Cal. Penal Code § 630. This factor weighs in favor of strict liability as the 9 legislature sought to avoid a serious harm to the public. But it is not clear that strict liability 10 is necessary to avoid this harm. Cf. People v. Simon, 9 Cal. 4th 493, 521 (1995) 11 (“Eavesdropping is not one of that class of crimes that affects public health, welfare or 12 safety for which strict liability is most often imposed without any ingredient of intent.”).
13 To the contrary, other sections of the CIPA prohibiting electronic eavesdropping expressly 14 include an intent element. See Cal. Penal Code §§ 631(a), 632(a).

15 v. Opportunity to Ascertain True Facts

16 “Courts have been justifiably reluctant to construe offenses carrying substantial 17 penalties as containing no mens rea element ‘where dispensing with mens rea would 18 require the defendant to have knowledge only of traditionally lawful conduct.’” In re Jorge 19 M., 23 Cal. 4th at 881 (quoting Staples, 511 U.S. at 615 (“It is unthinkable to us that 20 Congress intended to subject such law-abiding, well-intentioned citizens to a possible ten-21 year term of imprisonment if what they genuinely and reasonably believed was a 22 conventional semi-automatic weapon turns out to have worn down into or been secretly 23 modified to be a fully automatic weapon.”) (citation omitted)). Under some circumstances, 24 a person may lawfully record conversations. Here, without a mens rea requirement, a 25 person could be liable for violation of § 636(a) without any knowledge that his or her 26 traditionally lawful conduct was proscribed. Or, for that matter, as Plaintiffs urge, without 27 knowledge the conversations were being recorded. Absent knowledge that a conversation 28 between a person in custody and his or her attorney, licensed physician, or religious advisor

1 was being recorded, the conduct could be entirely innocent. See Coria, 21 Cal. 4th at 880 2 (offense proscribing manufacture of methamphetamine required knowledge of 3 manufactured substance as “[n]ot all acts of chemical synthesis are illegal; only the 4 manufacture of specific controlled substances is prohibited”); King, 38 Cal. 4th at 626 (“It 5 is highly unlikely that the Legislature intended that a person possessing an item listed in 6 section 12020(a)(1) for its lawful, utilitarian purpose, but unaware of the characteristic that 7 makes possession of the item illegal, would nevertheless be guilty of violating section 8 12020(a)(1).”). For example, a court reporter that leaves a courtroom recording system 9 running after a hearing ends could inadvertently capture a conversation between an 10 attorney and his or her client in the courtroom without any knowledge that the conduct was 11 proscribed. This factor weighs against strict liability.

12 vi. Difficulty of Proving Mental State

13 As discussed above, the legislature sought to avoid a serious harm to the public with 14 enactment of CIPA, and the statute should not construed in a manner that would impair its 15 effective enforcement. See In re Jorge M., 23 Cal. 4th at 884-85. But nothing before the 16 court indicates that strict liability is necessary for effective enforcement of § 636(a). The 17 conduct proscribed in § 636(a) does not necessarily present special obstacles to the 18 prosecution in proving a defendant’s mental state. Even if this factor were to weigh in 19 favor of strict liability, however, it is not dispositive. Id. (difficulty of proving mental state 20 factor weighed in favor of strict liability, but did not require it, when scienter requirement 21 of less than actual knowledge alleviated effective enforcement concerns).⁹

22 vii. Number of Expected Prosecutions

23 “The fewer the expected prosecutions, the more likely the legislature meant to 24 require the prosecuting officials to go into the issue of fault.” In re Jorge M., 23 Cal. 4th 25 at 873 (citation omitted). The CIPA indicates that new devices and technologies allowing 26

27 ⁹ The court does not consider whether § 636(a) requires criminal negligence or actual 28 knowledge as the parties do not address this issue in their briefing.

1 a person to eavesdrop represent a serious threat to privacy, but is silent about the number 2 of expected prosecutions. Cal. Penal Code § 630. The context of the statute and legislative 3 history of § 636(a) do not indicate whether a high number of prosecutions were expected.
4 This factor is inconclusive.

5 In sum, although § 636(a) “can be characterized as a remedial law aimed at 6 protecting public welfare, its text, history and surrounding statutory context provide no 7 compelling evidence of legislative intent to exclude all scienter from the [statute].” In re 8 Jorge M., 23 Cal. 4th at 887. The presumption against criminal liability without mental 9 fault or negligence provided by Penal Code § 20 is reinforced by the severity of felony 10 punishment and the possibility of proscribing traditionally lawful conduct. Section 636(a) 11 protects against a serious public harm, but not all statutes protecting against serious public 12 harm require strict liability to accomplish this goal. See In re Jorge M., 23 Cal. 4th at 887.
13 Section 636(a) is not an exception to the general rule that a defendant must have wrongful 14 intent to be guilty of a crime.¹⁰

15 III. Conclusion

16 Plaintiffs’ motion for summary judgment is denied as § 636(a) is not a strict liability 17 offense and Plaintiffs fail to establish there is no genuine issue of material fact as to whether 18 Securus had the intent necessary to violate the statute.

19 MOTION FOR CLASS CERTIFICATION

20 Also before the court is Plaintiffs’ Renewed Motion for Class Certification Or, In 21 the Alternative, Extension of Time (“renewed motion for class certification”). (Doc. No.
22

23 ¹⁰ Plaintiffs argue that this case involves civil liability, as it was filed pursuant to § 637.2, 24 not criminal liability. Plaintiffs cite no case, and the court is not aware of any, suggesting 25 that a different standard should apply in these circumstances, where a civil action is filed 26 for violation of an underlying criminal offense. The language of § 637.2 suggests 27 otherwise. Section 637.2 provides that “[a]ny person who has been injured by a violation 28 of this chapter may bring an action against the person who committed the violation.” Cal.
Penal Code § 637.2(a) (emphasis added). Plaintiffs allege that Securus was in “violation of” § 636(a).

122.) Securus opposes. (Doc. No. 124.) For the reasons discussed below, the motion is granted in part.

I. Background

On October 10, 2017, Plaintiffs filed a motion for class certification. (Doc. No. 62.) The court denied Plaintiffs' motion, finding that Plaintiffs failed to sufficiently identify an ascertainable class as the proposed class may have included anywhere between 22 and thousands of members. (Doc. No. 93.) On April 20, 2018, Securus filed a motion to alter or amend the order denying Plaintiffs' motion for class certification arguing that, contrary to the court's order, Securus had produced call logs by the time briefing on Plaintiffs' motion for class certification was complete. (Doc. No. 99.) The court denied Securus' motion, stating that Securus could raise any arguments regarding factual discrepancies in its opposition to Plaintiffs' renewed motion for class certification. (Doc. No. 127.)

II. Legal Standards

It is within this court's discretion to certify a class. Bouman v. Block, 940 F.2d 1211, 1232 (9th Cir. 1991). Under Rule 23(a), the class must satisfy four prerequisites: "(1) numerosity of [parties], (2) common questions of law or fact predominate, (3) the named [party's] claims and defenses are typical, and (4) the named [party] can adequately protect the interests of the class." Hanon v. Dataproducts, 976 F.2d 497, 508 (9th Cir. 1992). In addition to satisfying the requirements of Rule 23(a), Plaintiffs must satisfy at least one of the types of class actions identified in Rule 23(b). Briseno v. ConAgra Foods, Inc., 844 F.3d 1121, 1124 (9th Cir. 2017). Here, Plaintiffs argue that the class satisfies both Rule 23(b)(2) (the class is subject to common policies or unlawful acts, justifying injunctive relief) and Rule 23(b)(3) (questions of law or fact common to the members of the class predominate over any questions affecting only individual members, and a class action is superior to other available methods for the fair and efficient adjudication of the controversy).

The party seeking certification bears the burden of showing that each of the four requirements of Rule 23(a), and at least one requirement of Rule 23(b), has been satisfied.

1 Dukes v. Wal-Mart Stores, Inc., 603 F.3d 571, 580 (9th Cir. 2010) (en banc), rev'd on other 2 grounds, 564 U.S. 338 (2011). As noted by the Ninth Circuit,

3 When considering class certification under rule 23, district courts are not only at 4 liberty to, but must, perform a rigorous analysis to ensure that the prerequisites of 5 Rule 23(a) have been satisfied. It does not mean that a district court must conduct a 6 full-blown trial on the merits prior to certification. A district court's analysis will 7 often, though not always, require looking behind the pleadings, even to issues 8 overlapping with the merits of the underlying claims.

8 Id. at 581. In making this showing, the plaintiff must submit evidence to support class 9 certification under Rules 23(a) and (b). Doninger v. Pacific Northwest Bell, Inc., 564 F.2d 10 1304, 1308-09 (9th Cir. 1977). If the plaintiff fails to show that all elements of class 11 certification are satisfied, class certification should be denied. Gen. Tel. Co. v. Falcon, 457 12 U.S. 147, 161 (1982).

13 III. Discussion

14 A. Securus' Initial Objections

15 As an initial matter, Securus argues that the court should not consider the merits of 16 Plaintiffs' renewed motion for class certification for two reasons. First, Securus argues 17 that Plaintiffs' renewed motion for class certification is actually a motion for 18 reconsideration of the court's order denying Plaintiffs' initial motion for class certification.
19 Securus argues that Plaintiffs present no "new evidence" as the disputed call logs were 20 produced prior to the close of briefing on Plaintiffs' initial motion for class certification 21 and Plaintiffs simply reargue their previous points. This argument is unpersuasive.
22 Plaintiffs represent, and Securus does not dispute, that Securus did not produce some 23 documents relied upon in the instant motion until October 30, 2017, after Plaintiffs' initial 24 motion for class certification was filed. (Doc. No. 122-2, Ridley Decl. ¶ 24.) In addition, 25 Plaintiffs represent, and Securus does not dispute, that Securus did not identify what 26 discovery requests its October 30, 2017 supplemental production responded to until 27 November 20, 2017, after the motion for class certification was fully briefed. (Id.)
28

1 Second, Securus argues that the named Plaintiffs do not have standing to pursue 2 class claims. Securus raises a number of arguments in support of this contention. First, 3 Securus argues that Plaintiffs “produce no competent evidence” that Securus recorded any 4 of their calls. (Doc. No. 124 at 18.) As discussed in the standing analysis of Plaintiffs’
5 motion for partial summary judgment, Plaintiffs produce evidence indicating that Securus
6 recorded Plaintiffs’ calls. Supra Section II.B.2. In its opposition to Plaintiffs’ renewed 7 motion for class certification, Securus makes no specific objections to this evidence.

8 Second, Securus argues there is no evidence that it intentionally recorded any private 9 number calls. As the court held in its prior order denying Plaintiffs’ motion for class 10 certification, this argument is not properly raised in a motion for class certification. (Doc.
11 No. 93 at 2 n.1.)

12 Third, Securus argues there is no evidence that the recordings captured conversations 13 between persons covered by the statute—detainees and attorneys. Securus cites to Plaintiff 14 Elliott’s declaration that his staff and employees use the numbers designated as private for 15 confidential and privileged communications with detainee clients, (Doc. No. 62-38, Elliott 16 Decl. ¶¶ 8-9), and Plaintiffs Romero and Tiscareno’s declarations that they used Securus’ 17 phone system for confidential and privileged calls with their attorneys and their attorneys’
18 staff. (Doc. No. 62-41, Romero Decl. ¶¶ 8-9; Doc. No. 62-43, Tiscareno Decl. ¶¶ 8-9.)
19 Securus also cites to an email exchange between the Sheriff’s Office and Securus 20 employees indicating that five probation office numbers may have been erroneously 21 included in a list of numbers designated as private. (Doc. No. 62-28, Exh. 25 at 2-3.)

22 A rigorous review of the evidence indicates that Securus admits to recording 23 detainee calls with telephone numbers belonging to an attorney and registered as private.
24 (Doc. No. 62-38, Elliott Decl. ¶¶ 8-9; Doc. No. 62-4, Exh. 1.) In email, Securus employees 25 repeatedly referred to these recorded calls as “attorney calls.” (Doc. No. 62-4, Exh. 1 at 26 46-48, 62.) Securus presents no evidence (or argument) that people other than an attorney 27 or his or her staff used numbers designated by attorneys as private. An attorney may hire 28 agents, including paralegals and assistants, to engage in confidential communications with

1 clients. See Cal. Evid. Code § 952. This evidence is sufficient for class certification 2 purposes to establish that Securus recorded calls between detainees and attorneys or their 3 staff. If a probation office or other non-attorney numbers were designated as private and 4 are included in the class list these numbers can be identified and excluded.

5 Lastly, Securus argues there is no evidence of a concrete injury because Securus 6 purged the recordings. As the court previously held, violation of CIPA is the violation of 7 a procedural right granted by statute, sufficient to constitute an injury in fact. (Doc. No.
8 21 at 9) (citing Spokeo, Inc. v. Robins, 136 S. Ct. 1540, 1549 (2016).) “In a class action, 9 standing is satisfied if at least one named plaintiff meets the requirements.” Bates v. United 10 Parcel Serv., Inc., 511 F.3d 974, 985 (9th Cir. 2007). Plaintiffs present evidence that their 11 detainee-attorney calls were recorded without permission. To the extent Securus argues 12 that it did not violate § 636(a) because it purged the recordings, this argument should be 13 raised in an appropriate motion.

14 B. Class Definition

15 Plaintiffs seek to certify the following class—

16 Every person who was a party to any portion of a conversation between a person
17 who was in the physical custody of a law enforcement officer or other public officer
18 in California, and that person’s attorney, on a telephone number designated or 19 requested not to be recorded, any portion of which was eavesdropped on or recorded 20 [by Defendant Securus Technologies, Inc.]¹¹ by means of an electronic device during the period from July, 10, 2008 to the applicable opt-out date, inclusive (the “Class Period”).

21 (Doc. No. 122-1 at 8.)

22 C. Rule 23(b)(3)

23 Plaintiffs seek class certification pursuant to Rule 23(b)(3). Plaintiffs’ CIPA claims 24 meet the requirements of this rule.
25

26
27 ¹¹ At oral argument, Plaintiffs confirmed that the class definition was only intended to reach 28 persons whose communications were eavesdropped on or recorded by Securus. Thus,
Plaintiffs agreed to add the bracketed language at the court’s suggestion.

1 1. Predominance

2 Common issues predominate over individual issues in this case. “The predominance 3 analysis under Rule 23(b)(3) focuses on ‘the relationship between the common and 4 individual issues’ in the case and ‘tests whether proposed classes are sufficiently cohesive
5 to warrant adjudication by representation.’” Wang v. Chinese Daily News, Inc., 737 F.3d 6 538, 544 (9th Cir. 2013) (quoting Hanlon v. Chrysler Corp., 150 F.3d 1011, 1022 (9th Cir.
7 1998)). The predominance requirement ensures that “common questions present a 8 significant aspect of the case” such that “there is clear justification”—in terms of efficiency 9 and judicial economy—for resolving those questions in a single adjudication. Hanlon, 150 10 F.3d at 1022 (citation omitted). This requirement is satisfied when a common nucleus of 11 facts and law is the central feature of the litigation, and when the “[p]laintiffs have shown 12 that there are plausible classwide methods of proof available to prove their claims.” Wolph 13 v. Acer Am. Corp., 272 F.R.D. 477, 487 (N.D. Cal. 2011) (citation omitted).

14 Whether Securus recorded calls between detainees and attorneys without their 15 permission is a class-wide question answered by common proof. The common proof 16 offered by Plaintiffs is: (1) a series of email exchanges between the San Diego County
17 Sheriff’s Office and Securus employees indicating that Securus recorded a number of calls 18 with attorney phone numbers designated as private and attached spreadsheets identifying 19 the recorded calls (Doc. No. 62-4, Exh. 1); (2) Securus’ discovery responses identifying 20 detainee-attorney calls that were recorded; and (3) the declaration of Ian Jones, Securus
21 Director of Support Services, stating that (a) Securus indefinitely maintains call detail 22 reports that include the parties to the call, when and where the call took place, the time of 23 initiating the call, and the duration of the call (Doc. No. 38-1, Jones Decl. ¶ 2), (b) Securus 24 indefinitely maintains user activity logs, which show when phone numbers have been 25 designated as private (Id. ¶ 4), and (c) the Sheriff’s Office informed Securus that it recorded 26 calls designated as private. (Id. ¶ 7.)

27 How and why Securus recorded detainee-attorney calls is also a question that may 28 be answered by common proof. The email exchange between the Sheriff’s Office and

1 Securus indicates that Securus did not know why detainee calls with private numbers were 2 recorded, but in 2014, it invested significant resources in investigating the “root cause” of 3 the issue. (Doc. No. 62-4, Exh. 1.) Assuming Securus identified the “root cause,” the 4 answer should explain how and why the calls were recorded in San Diego County, and 5 whether the recording was intentional.

6 Securus makes numerous arguments in opposition. First, Securus argues that 7 questions about “knowledge and consent” of individual participants to recorded calls will 8 predominate over common questions of fact. Securus presents no evidence suggesting that 9 issues of “knowledge and consent” must be addressed by individual inquiry. Questions 10 about whether individuals knew that their calls were recorded may, for example, be 11 answered by evidence that Securus never played a prompt informing call participants that 12 the call was being recorded when the call involved a private number. Without any evidence 13 that any detainee or attorney ever consented to the recording of their calls, the court need 14 not assume that a detainee or attorney would consent to the recording of such privileged 15 calls. See Reyes v. Educ. Credit Mgmt. Corp., 322 F.R.D. 552, 560-61 (S.D. Cal. 2017), 16 appeal granted, No. 17-80199, 2017 WL 6762227 (9th Cir. Dec. 21, 2017) (“Moreover, 17 [defendant] has not submitted other persuasive evidence of express consent or actual 18 knowledge of recording during the Class Period followed by additional calls. The Court 19 will therefore not presume that the need to resolve issues related to consent will defeat the 20 predominance requirement.”) (quotation marks and citation omitted).

21 Second, Securus argues that the question of whether it intentionally recorded calls 22 will predominate over common questions of fact. Securus does not provide a factual basis 23 for its argument that the answer to this question will require individualized inquiries. As 24 noted above, the evidence before the court suggests the opposite—that common proof may 25 indicate Securus did not know why any of the calls were recorded.

26 Third, Securus argues that a damages award would require individualized inquiries 27 into the severity of any CIPA violation as Penal Code § 637.2 requires award of “the 28 greater” of actual damages or a $5,000 statutory penalty. Section 637.2 provides:

1 (a) Any person who has been injured by a violation of this chapter may bring an 2 action against the person who committed the violation for the greater of the 3 following amounts: (1) Five thousand dollars ($5,000) per violation. (2) Three times 4 the amount of actual damages, if any, sustained by the plaintiff.

5 ...

6 (c) It is not a necessary prerequisite to an action pursuant to this section that the 7 plaintiff has suffered, or be threatened with, actual damages.

8 A plaintiff may recover a minimum of $5,000 for a violation of the CIPA, or actual 9 damages. Here, Plaintiffs seek statutory damages. Securus cites no authority for the 10 proposition that § 637.2 requires a plaintiff to seek actual damages, instead of statutory 11 damages, if they exceed $5,000.

12 Fourth, Securus argues that Plaintiffs produce no evidence of the actual parties to 13 the call—only the detainee name and a phone number associated with an attorney. (Doc.
14 No. 124 at 15 n.6.) This argument was rejected in the standing section above. Supra, 15 Section III.A.

16 Fifth, Securus argues that over 100 of the calls identified in Exhibit A lasted fewer 17 than 90 seconds, with numerous calls lasting even less than 2 seconds. (Doc. No. 124 at 18 15-16.) Securus argues that “[c]allers may have hung up before speaking with anyone, 19 been sent to voicemail, spoken to someone other than an attorney, or experienced a variety 20 of other scenarios that would not trigger liability.” Id. Participants to a conversation that 21 lasts less than 90 seconds may communicate privileged information. Substantive, 22 privileged information may be communicated in only a few seconds. Securus does not 23 identify how many calls lasted less than a few seconds and identifies only 15 calls that have 24 no duration. (Id.) The issue of whether some calls did not connect to an attorney or 25 detainee because they lasted less than a few seconds or had no duration can be resolved on 26 common proof as the call logs identify the duration of every call.

27 2. Superiority

28 The court previously denied Plaintiffs’ motion for class certification on the ground that Plaintiffs failed to present sufficient evidence to show that there was an

1 administratively feasible manner to determine whether a class action is the superior method
2 for prosecuting Plaintiffs' claims. (Doc. No. 93 at 4-5.) In their renewed motion, Plaintiffs 3 identify a class with at least 246 members. This evidence is sufficient to demonstrate that 4 a class action is superior to other available methods of litigation and would likely achieve 5 substantial administrative and management efficiencies.

6 "Rule 23(b)(3) requires that a class action be 'superior to other available methods 7 for fairly and efficiently adjudicating the controversy,' and it specifically mandates that 8 courts consider 'the likely difficulties in managing a class action.'" Briseno, 844 F.3d at 9 1227-28 (quoting Fed. R. Civ. P. 23(b)(3)(D)). Thus, concerns about the ascertainability 10 of a class may be addressed in the context of Rule 23(b). Id. See also Pierce v. County of 11 Orange, 526 F.3d 1190, 1200 (9th Cir. 2008) (Rule 23(b) does not offer "a superior method
12 for fair and efficient adjudication in light of expected difficulties identifying class 13 members").

14 Plaintiffs represent that they have now identified at least 220 attorney and 930
15 detainee class members. First, Plaintiffs argue that a spreadsheet Defendant produced, 16 STI_000004, identifies 698 detainees and 222 attorneys whose calls were recorded without 17 their permission. The parties dispute what STI_000004 represents.¹² The court does not 18

19 ¹² In its November 28, 2017 supplemental responses, Defendant identified STI_000004 as 20 responsive to Plaintiffs' request for production of documents "identifying any DETAINEE 21 who was a party to any telephone call to or from a PRIVATE NUMBER between such 22 DETAINEE and an ATTORNEY, any portion of which was recorded by YOUR 23 SYSTEM." (Doc. No. 122-7, Exh. D at 17.) Plaintiffs argue that Defendant's November 24 28, 2017 supplemental response confirms that STI_000004 reflects private telephone 25 numbers whose calls were recorded. (Doc. No. 122-1 at 13 n.4.) Securus argues that 26 STI_000004 is not a call log and does not represent any call recordings. (Doc. No. 124 at 27 17.) Instead, Ankur Desai, Director of Call Center Subsidiaries at Securus Technologies, 28 Inc., declares that STI_000004 "reflects some, but not all, active phone numbers designated within Securus as 'private' at the time of its creation [in 2014]." (Doc. No. 124-1, Desai Decl. ¶ 3.) Defendant represents that it only produced STI_000004 because it was attached to an email string with content that was otherwise responsive to Plaintiffs' document request. (Doc. No. 124 at 17.) Neither party attached STI_000004 to their pleadings.

1 rely on this disputed spreadsheet, which is not included in the moving or opposition papers, 2 in reaching its decision.

3 Second, Plaintiffs identify 232 detainee and 14 attorney class members from the 4 Sheriff's Office's¹³ and Defendant's¹⁴ responses to Plaintiffs' discovery requests. This 5 evidence is sufficient to establish that the class will likely include hundreds of detainee and 6 attorney members, weighing in favor of class adjudication. In addition, in light of 7 Plaintiffs' evidence they were not warned that their calls would be recorded, a significant 8 number of class members may not know that their calls were recorded. Thus, a class action 9 is superior to other available methods of litigation and would likely achieve substantial 10 administrative and management efficiencies.

11 D. Rule 23(b)(2)

12 Plaintiffs' requests for injunctive and declaratory relief meet the requirements of 13 Rule 23(b)(2). Rule 23(b)(2) provides for class certification when "the party opposing the 14 class has acted or refused to act on grounds that apply generally to the class, so that final 15 injunctive relief or corresponding declaratory relief is appropriate respecting the class as a 16 whole." Fed. R. Civ. P. 23(b)(2). This provision "applies 'when a single injunction or 17

19 ¹³ Plaintiffs represent that a review of documents produced by the Sheriff's Office in 20 response to Plaintiffs' third party subpoena produces 93 discrete detainees whose calls with 21 attorneys were recorded without their permission. (Doc. No. 122-1 at 12.) As discussed 22 above, the Sheriff's Office sent Securus spreadsheets identifying recorded calls between 23 detainees and numbers designated as private. (Doc. No. 62-2, Teel Decl.; Doc. No. 62-4, 24 Exh. 1.)

25 ¹⁴ Defendant produced a spreadsheet, "Exhibit A," in response to Plaintiffs' interrogatory 26 requesting Defendant "IDENTIFY all PERSONS who were a party to any telephone call 27 conversation made to or from a PRIVATE NUMBER to or from a DETAINEE, any portion 28 of which was recorded by YOUR SYSTEM during the CLASS PERIOD." (Doc. No. 74-1, Teel Decl. ¶¶ 2, 3.) Exhibit A lists the facility site name, called telephone number, call start and end time, call duration, first and last name of the detainee, and whether the number was flagged as private. (Doc. No. 74-2, Exh. 1 at 20-32.) From this list, Plaintiffs count 153 detainees who participated in a call with a telephone number flagged as private.

1 declaratory judgment would provide relief to each member of the class.” Wang, 737 F.3d
2 at 544 (citing Wal-Mart Stores, Inc. v. Dukes, 564 U.S. 338, 360 (2011)).

3 Plaintiffs seek to “enjoin[] Securus from eavesdropping on, listening to, recording, 4 disclosing, or using private, confidential, and privileged communications between 5 detainees and their attorneys without permission of all parties” and a court order requiring 6 “Securus to identify, seek, obtain, encrypt, and ultimately destroy at the conclusion of this 7 action all existing recordings in their possession or the possession of third parties to whom 8 they have given access or disclosed unlawfully recorded communications.” (TAC ¶¶ 118-9 119.) Plaintiffs also seek declaratory relief “declaring Securus’ practice of eavesdropping 10 on, listening to, recording, disclosing, or using private, confidential, and privileged [sic] 11 between detainees and their attorney without permission of all parties unlawful.” (Id. ¶ 12 117.)

13 Plaintiffs’ requested relief would address the class as a whole without individualized 14 inquiries. Plaintiffs provide evidence that Securus recorded detainee-attorney calls without 15 their permission. The proposed class includes similarly situated detainees and attorneys 16 who use Securus’ communications system and whose calls were recorded without their 17 permission. Declaratory relief provides the basis for an injunction and statutory damages.
18 An injunction prohibiting Securus from eavesdropping on, listening to, recording, 19 disclosing, or using communications between detainees and their attorneys without their 20 permission would prevent an issue similar to the one presented here from recurring. It 21 would benefit all members of the class.

22 Securus argues that the request for injunctive relief is moot because Plaintiffs 23 Romero and Tiscareno are no longer incarcerated and Securus corrected “the glitch several 24 years ago with no known recurrence since that time.” (Doc. No. 124 at 27.) The court
25 already rejected Securus’ argument that Plaintiffs lack standing as Romero and Tiscareno 26 are no longer incarcerated. (Doc. No. 21 at 9 n.7) (“While Plaintiffs Romero and Tiscareno 27 may no longer be incarcerated, Plaintiff Elliott, as a criminal defense attorney, may require 28 Defendant’s services to communicate with other clients in the future.”). The court also

1 rejects Securus’ argument that the issue was corrected. “A defendant’s voluntary cessation 2 of allegedly unlawful conduct ordinarily does not suffice to moot a case.” Friends of the 3 Earth, Inc. v. Laidlaw Env’tl. Servs. (TOC), Inc., 528 U.S. 167, 174 (2000). “For mootness
4 to apply based on the voluntary cessation of the complained of unlawful behavior, the party 5 must prove that subsequent events make it ‘absolutely clear that the allegedly wrongful 6 behavior could not reasonably be expected to recur.’” Reyes, 322 F.R.D. at 569-70 7 (quoting Id. at 189). Securus does not explain what “the glitch” was, when it was fixed, or 8 why there is no possibility of recurrence. Securus presents no evidence that the issue has 9 been addressed, but simply asserts in its opposition (without supporting declarations) that 10 Securus “corrected” the issue. Securus fails to demonstrate it is absolutely clear the issue 11 will not recur.

12 Securus also argues that Plaintiffs primarily seek monetary damages, not injunctive 13 relief. In cases “where a plaintiff seeks both declaratory and monetary relief, courts may 14 certify a damages-seeking class under Rule 23(b)(3), and an injunction-seeking class under 15 Rule 23(b)(2).” Barrett v. Wesley Fin. Grp., LLC, No. 13CV554-LAB (KSC), 2015 WL
16 12910740, at *7 (S.D. Cal. Mar. 30, 2015) (citing Wang, 737 F.3d at 544). See also Raffin 17 v. Medicredit, Inc., No. CV154912GHKPJWX, 2017 WL 131745, at *10 (C.D. Cal. Jan.
18 3, 2017) (certifying Cal. Penal Code § 637.2 claim for injunctive relief under (b)(2) and 19 the claim for monetary relief under (b)(3)). The court finds it appropriate to certify a class 20 for injunctive relief pursuant to Rule 23(b)(2) because “a single injunction or declaratory 21 judgment would provide relief to each member of the class.” Dukes, 131 S. Ct. at 2557.

22 E. Rule 23(a) Prerequisites

23 1. Numerosity

24 The numerosity requirement is met. Rule 23(a)(1) requires the proposed class be 25 “so numerous that joinder of all members is impracticable.” Although there is no absolute 26 threshold, courts generally find numerosity satisfied when the class includes at least forty 27 members. Gomez v. Rossi Concrete, Inc., 270 F.R.D. 579, 588 (S.D. Cal. 2010); Celano 28 v. Marriott Int’l, Inc., 242 F.R.D. 544, 549 (N.D. Cal. 2007) (“[C]ourts generally find that

1 the numerosity factor is satisfied if the class comprises 40 or more members and will find 2 that it has not been satisfied when the class comprises 21 or fewer.”). As discussed above, 3 Plaintiffs identify 246 potential class members. Joinder of this many plaintiffs would be 4 impracticable.

5 2. Commonality

6 The commonality requirement is met. Rule 23(a)(2) requires a party to demonstrate 7 that there are “questions of law or fact common to the class.” “So long as there is ‘even a 8 single common question,’ a would-be class can satisfy the commonality requirement of 9 Rule 23(a)(2).” Wang, 737 F.3d at 544 (citing Dukes, 564 U.S. 338)). “The commonality 10 preconditions of Rule 23(a)(2) are less rigorous than the companion requirements of Rule 11 23(b)(3),” that is, the “predominance” inquiry that requires that “common questions 12 ‘present a significant aspect of the case.’” Hanlon, 150 F.3d at 1022 (citation omitted). As 13 discussed above, common issues dominate this litigation.

14 3. Typicality

15 The named Plaintiffs’ claims are typical of the class. Like all class members, 16 Plaintiffs’ confidential calls were recorded by Securus without their permission. Securus 17 argues that the named Plaintiffs declared that they did not receive a warning or phone 18 prompt indicating that their calls would be recorded, but there is evidence of “a ‘generic 19 prompt’ on phone calls not designated as private that ‘states the call is being recorded.’” 20 (Doc. No. 124 at 22.) “Because Plaintiffs have produced no evidence that the accidentally 21 recorded calls also failed to include this generic prompt, their assertions that they did not 22 receive the prompt is actually strong evidence that their calls were not recorded.” (Id.)
23 (emphasis in original.) Securus’ argument is unpersuasive. Plaintiffs allege that Securus 24 recorded calls with telephone numbers that were designated as private. Securus argues that 25 a “generic prompt” played on calls not designated as private. Whether the “generic 26 prompt” played may indicate whether a telephone number was designated as private, but 27 not whether it was recorded.

28 ///

1 4. Adequacy

2 The named Plaintiffs and class counsel will fairly and adequately protect the interests
3 of the class. As discussed above, Plaintiffs' claims are typical of the class. Class counsel 4 support their motion with declarations detailing their qualifications and experience with 5 class actions. (Doc. Nos. 62-45, 62-48, 122-2, 122-8, 122-13.)

6 Securus argues that Plaintiffs' new lawyers do not have experience representing 7 classes. The declarations of Plaintiffs' counsel indicate that, as a whole, they have 8 extensive experience both defending against and representing classes. (See, e.g., Doc. No.
9 62-45, Marron Decl.).

10 Securus argues that Plaintiffs' counsels' representation thus far demonstrates their 11 inadequacy, citing to missed deadlines and other unfavorable rulings. Counsels' actions 12 do not rise to the level of disqualifying them from representing a class. Cf. WRIGHTEN v.
13 METROPOLITAN HOSPITALS, INC., 726 F.2d 1346, 1352 (9th Cir. 1984) (denying class 14 certification in part because counsel's "pleadings and interrogatories had an 'assembly line' 15 quality that suggested something less than the forthright and vigorous approach required 16 of counsel in class actions").

17 Lastly, Securus argues that the attorneys from Foley create an appearance of divided 18 loyalties because the law firm defends against class actions.¹⁵ Securus cites to cases in 19 which Foley represented "a competitor of Securus" who also provides inmate calling 20
21
22
23

24 ¹⁵ Securus requests the court take judicial notice of public court documents filed in matters 25 litigated by Plaintiffs' counsel. (Doc. No. 124-3.) The court grants this request as the 26 filings are not subject to reasonable dispute because they are generally known or are 27 capable of accurate and ready determination. See Fed. R. Evid. 201(b); Lee v. City of Los 28 Angeles, 250 F.3d 668, 689-90 (9th Cir. 2001); United States v. Ritchie, 342 F.3d 903, 909 (9th Cir. 2003) (courts may take judicial notice of "the records and reports of administrative bodies").

1 services for correctional facilities.¹⁶ These cases do not involve allegations relating to the 2 recording of telephone calls.¹⁷ The court finds counsel adequate to serve as a class counsel.

3 F. Certification of All Claims

4 Securus argues that Plaintiffs failed to present evidence to support class certification
5 for claims other than their CIPA claims. In addition to their CIPA claims, Plaintiffs assert 6 five other causes of action in the operative Third Amended Complaint: (1) unfair
7 competition, violation of Cal. Bus. & Prof. Code §§ 17200, et seq.; (2) concealment; (3) 8 fraud; (4) negligence; and (5) unjust enrichment. In their reply brief, Plaintiffs argue that 9 all of their other claims “in part stem from Securus’ violation of CIPA.” (Doc. No. 128 at 10 13.)

11 The court agrees with Securus. A court may certify a class for specific claims, 12 issues, or defenses. See Fed. R. Civ. P. 23(c)(1)(B) (“An order that certifies a class action 13 must define the class and the class claims, issues, or defenses...”). Plaintiffs cite no 14 authority for the proposition that claims may be certified when they stem “in part” from a 15 certified claim. Nor do Plaintiffs discuss in their motion whether their other claims will 16 require individualized inquiries, such as inquiries into damages, reliance, or 17 misrepresentations. See, e.g., Mazza v. Am. Honda Motor Co., 666 F.3d 581, 596 (9th Cir.
18 2012). In their reply brief, Plaintiffs raise a handful of “examples” of possible common 19 issues without supporting evidence. (Doc. No. 128 at 13.) Plaintiffs fail to meet their 20

22 ¹⁶ Securus argues that Foley counsel in this matter also represented Global Tel*Link, 23 another company that provides inmate calling services for correctional facilities. (Doc.
24 No. 124-3, Request for Judicial Notice at 2, 18.)

25 ¹⁷ Securus’ citation to a reply brief filed in an unrelated case that argued the Foley counsel 26 was not adequate counsel is also unpersuasive. In this case, the court rejected the plaintiffs’ 27 motion and argument. Gonzalez et al v. CoreCivic, Inc., 17cv2573 JLS (NLS), Doc. No.
28 44 at 10 (S.D. Cal. April 4, 2018) (“The Court is under no illusion as to the stakes of this Motion. Gonzalez Plaintiffs filed a nearly identical cause of action as the Owino Plaintiffs, seek to consolidate the cases, and wrest control of interim class counsel from the Owino Plaintiffs.”).

1 burden to establish that the requirements of Rule 23(a) and (b)(3) are satisfied for claims 2 other than their CIPA claims.

3 IV. Conclusion

4 Plaintiffs' requests for monetary damages under CIPA are certified pursuant to Rule 5 23(b)(3) and their requests for injunctive and declaratory relief are certified pursuant to 6 Rule 23(b)(2). The following class is certified—

7 Every person who was a party to any portion of a conversation between a person
8 who was in the physical custody of a law enforcement officer or other public officer
9 in California, and that person's attorney, on a telephone number designated or 10 requested not to be recorded, any portion of which was eavesdropped on or recorded 11 by Defendant Securus Technologies, Inc. by means of an electronic device during the period from July, 10, 2008 to the applicable opt-out date, inclusive (the "Class Period").

12 The Law Office of Robert L. Teel, the Law Offices of Ronald A. Marron, APLC, and Foley
13 & Lardner, LLP are appointed as class counsel and Plaintiffs Juan Romero, Frank 14 Tiscareno, and Kenneth Elliot are appointed as class representatives.
